

Chief Nurse Administrator for Nursing program at Columbia College

Columbia College is seeking applicants for a Chief Nurse administrator to oversee its Nursing program. Responsibilities for this position will include teaching in the nursing program, overseeing the program, and completing and maintaining CCNE accreditation.

The successful candidate for this chief nurse administrator must hold a current unencumbered SC license, a graduate (master's or doctoral) degree in nursing, and a doctoral degree from an accredited college or university at the time of appointment.

Columbia College offers a totally online RN to BSN program as well as an on-campus BSN degree in an innovative partnership with a local technical college.

Columbia College, a women's college related to the United Methodist Church, educates students in the liberal arts tradition. The College provides educational opportunities that develop students' capacity for critical thought and expression, lifelong learning, acceptance of personal responsibility, and commitment to service and social justice. In furtherance of its mission, the College is responsive to the needs of students, the communities to which it belongs, and the greater global society. Columbia College encompasses the women's college, established in 1854 and the evening and graduate programs serving women and men. Columbia College is noted for faculty who foster academic excellence through collaborative teaching and learning; a vital learning community in which character, ethics, and values are cultivated; the study of leadership enhanced by opportunities for practical application; programs that capitalize on advances in technology; and learning environments that extend beyond the classroom. Columbia College is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. For information about the College, visit www.columbiasc.edu.
